FORMER RESIDENT HONORED

The following article which is taken from the Seattle Daily Times refers to a former resident who was born and grew up in or near Marmora. Mr. Maloney moved to North Bend in 1888 and has lived there ever since. His friends in this vicinity will be glad to learn that he has not only been successful from a business standpoint, but has also won the respect and esteem of his fellow citizens being elected to the highest office in the gift of the newly incorporated city, that of its first mayor.

North Bend, Wednesday, Feb. 24.— This city voted almost unanimously yesterday for the incorporation as a city of the fourth class. While a good vote was cast, the election was very quiet and the entire vote was polled early in the day. There was but one ticket in the field and no scratching was done. The ticket elected consists of Peter J. Maloney, mayor; E. Catching, W. C. Weeks, Charles Thaldorf, Fred Damburat and A. R. Mason, councilmen; E. J. Seigrist, treasurer.

Several erroneous reports have been given prominence by other newspapers of Seattle to the effect that the town was badly divided on the subject of incorporation and whether the town should be wet or dry, and each of these reports has been made without any foundation, and the real status of affairs has been reported correctly in The Times only. The people of this city are united almost to a man on these questions and are justly indignant over the

Your Irish Name: O'Driscoll clan's claim to Co. Cork

Eidersceoil, the founder of the OhEidersceoil (anglicized as O'Drisceoil), is a descendant of Lughaidh Laidhe, the first of the Corca Laoidhe clan. So the O'Driscolls have a long-standing claim to territory in County Cork (Corca).

The O'Driscolls were pressured out of South Kerry by the O'Sullivans and so they settled around Baltimore in south-west Cork. Further pressured by the O'Mahoneys and O'Donovans, the O'Driscoll territory was further reduced. But the clan held on in Cork and in 1460 the clan chief founded the Franciscan monastery there.

Notables

During the seventeenth century, many O'Driscoll men were prominent in the army of James II in Ireland. Cornelius O'Driscoll, a colonial in the Irish brigade, distinguished himself at the battle of Ondara in 1707.

The O'Driscolls were imprisoned repeatedly by the British because of their unsewering loyalty to the Catholic Faith. Cromwell confiscated their land and executed the leaders of the clan. The survivors' descendants still live in the county today.

Mr. M. J. Moloney, who recently purchased H. J. Clarke's store and lot, expects to commence operations soon on the erection of a fine modern garage. Messrs. Moloney and C. A. McWilliams, who are agents for the Chevrolet car, are at present excavating for an underground tank which will be placed in front of the garage about 5 feet below the surface of the ground. The tank will hold 10 barrels and will be fitted with an up-to-date automatic pump.

HYMENEAL

MALONEY—QUINLAN

One of the prettiest weddings that have taken place in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Marmora, in years took place yesterday, when Miss Margaret Quinlan was united in marriage to Mr. Patrick Maloney, of Cordova Mines. The bride was handsomely attired in a gown of white cashmere trimmed with white satin and a large white hat to match. Her sister, Miss Katie Quinlan, acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. M. J. Maloney supported the groom. The wedding party entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Miss Traynor. Mass was also sung by the choir and Miss Traynor rendered a very pleasing solo.

After the ceremony the company returned to the home of the groom, where a sumptuous repast had been prepared. The happy couple left on a wedding trip to Muskoka. The large number of handsome gifts show the high esteem in which the young couple are held.

A beautiful life,
that came to an end,
he died as he lived,
everyone's friend.
In our hearts a memory
will always be kept,
of one we loved,
laughed and joked with,
and will never forget
